20 July 1987MEMORANDUM FOR: [redacted]
Executive Director, CIA

FROM: [redacted]
Deputy Director for Requirements and Evaluation, ICS

SUBJECT: Joint Help [redacted]

25X1

At various times over the last few weeks, I told you that I would like to come over for a briefing about CIA and would be willing to give a briefing in return about DDR&E. I am now ready to schedule both. I have created a briefing to explain what DDR&E is all about and how we are starting to go about our business. I am willing to come over and talk to CIA officers about our work here, including how it is in their interest to help us. I leave the timing to your judgment; your secretary should call [redacted] to schedule all of this.

At the same time, as part of my long-term efforts here, I have found that we need copies of CIA intelligence production. We already have achieved access to the regular stream of CIA products, such as hardcopy reports from the Directorate of Intelligence and, on occasion, from the Directorate of Operations.

Even so, I would greatly appreciate your help in mentioning to your managers and staff that if they produce more informal documents, such as type-script memoranda and substantive overviews in the form of talking points, I would value receiving a copy. I am not asking that people be indiscreet, recognizing that many things done in CIA are done for specific customers involved in sensitive if not compartmented work. Rather, this is intended to ensure that the full spectrum of your good work is available to those in the Intelligence Community Staff who would benefit from it in their work on requirements and evaluations, as well as other important topics.
